By LOUIS A. DOUGHER. Now comes Herman Schaefer with a baseball holiday in his honor. The former Griffman, now connected in a purely comic capacity with the Newark Feds, is today celebrating in Chicago. It is expected that some misguided gents will present him with safety razors, traveling bags, anud stock in the Comstock Lode when the Newfeds tackle the Whales.

Schaefer is very popular in Chicago, his home town. When with the Nationals he could always draw a laugh by merely walking across the field. He will hardly do more with the Newfeds, for Schaef's play will be right there when the boys show up with the gifts. Schaefer never loses out on one of those things. Holding "days" is becoming chronic in baseball lately. So far the Washington club has carefully refrained from any clubs everywhere are staging this semiholiday stuff. It makes good here and

Though he gave an excellent exhibition of twirling, good enough to win any ball game, he most certainly was assigted greatly by the diamond gods in that second frame, when the Griffs made all their three runs. Don't take anything away from Doc, but just remember that streak of luck showing in his behalf in that third session.

Chick Gandil started things by raising a Texas leaguer out in short left. Lavan and Shotton tried for it, and, as usual, neither got it. Gandil reached second on that mental lapse. Acosta followed with a perfect sacrifice, and Henry's safe whack to left brought Gandil across. McBride forced Henry. Pratt made a fine stop of Ayers' bounder, but tossed poorly to Lavan at second for a force-out, and two were on. Danny Moeller ended the rally with a healthy tripir to the jury box and its thirty-five occupants. McBride and Ayers raced atound on the rap and were in before Firster whiffed, leaving Moeller stranded.

TY COBB SAYS---

it's a good thing for baseball that the Braves are showing more strength as race ages---Yanks should beat Griffs.

Johnny Evers Tells Georgia Peach That Champions Are Certain to Repeat This Year-Nationals Offer Interesting Sidelight Fight.

By TY COBB,

World's Champion All-around Player.

It is a mighty fine thing for baseball that the world's champion Braves have once more assumed a prominent position in the National League race. Otherwise the main point of a fine moral lesson might have been shadowed.

The fight of George Stallings' team through the second half of the 1914 campaign was one of the great wonders of diamond history. A most fitting climax for this sensational spurt was the overthrow of the vaunted Athletics in four straight games for the world's championship. Even yet there are any number of people who regard the great Boston drive of last year more in the nature of sheer luck than of exceptional worth. While Boston was in the rut this year the opinion grew that the success of a year ago was merely a fluke.

Boston right now seems bent en vindicating the reputation for gameness and stick-to-liveness it earned last season and that is a mighty fine thing for the profession in general. Anything that spurs on hustling in a club in these unsettled times is a great boon indeed. There is altogether too much indifference in the ranks as the result of term

"Now, Ty, we are no 'cheese' champion-and we will be in the next world series as sure as the sun will set tonight. There is more class to our outfit than there was a year ago and now we are in a far better position to make that class count. We have been winning games with small scores. You know as well as I that that is the real tip-off on any club's

CLOSE GAMES DECIDE THE TITLES.

There was clear reason in Johnny Evers' arguments. It takes far more grit and spirit and fight to win by one run than to win by five runs. The close, uphill struggles are the ones calculated to test real championship admeness. But I thought, as I parted with Evers, how extremely fortunate was George Stallings to have such a conscientious and earnest captain as the Keystone King. I wondered if I would be so enthusiastic and energetic after I had seen so many grueling seasons as little Johnnie Evers. He is a monument to the national pastime. The National League did well to overlook his irrelevant fremarks about the closeness of the race and the incompetence of the umpires. Johnnie's tongue wags freely when he is under the excitement of a tense situation. But no one quicker than this same Trojan would resent the faintest breath of suspicion against the game. Evers long career has been one glowing tribute to the honesty of the game and the profession in general.

To get back to my own league: the owners of the New York Americans are nobody's come-ons. If I am not mistaken Colonel Ruppert and Captain Huston will have a real club for Bill Donovan before he is much older. It takes time to build up a club so badly shattered as the Yankees were but everyone connected with the New York Americans seems pulling together to simplify the task.

The men backing Donovan's team have been most liberal and generous in lending their strong financial support to the beterment of the New York situation.

The secuts have beaten other major ague sleuths to half a dozen highly touted minor league prospects, among the number being Barney, Mogridge and Tipple.

the number being Barney, Alogridge and Tipple.

"Donovan prefers youngsters that he can educate into his own theories rather than aging veterans who are set in their notions and style," Captain Huston said to me a short time ago. "I think he is right in that."

And I think the captain is right in thinking so. Donovan has the nucleus for a grand club. Fritz Maisel is a real third baseman—one of the very best. Pipp has made good at first. Boone and Peckinpaugh are adamant on defense, and could be carried to the best advantage if the outfield measured up to the standard of hitting efficiency. The club needs some real outfielders, a catcher or two and a couple of competent southpaws. And the only way to get them is to develop them from minor league material.

It is impossible newadays to go out to develop them from minor league may terial.

It is impossible nowadays to go out promiscuously and buy a champion by taking the pick of rival clubs. In the first place, practically no one operating a major team will part with anyone who could possibly be of value to himself, let alone any one else. The action of Connie Mack this year furnishes the exception which proves the rule.

Yet in this same connection is proven the fact that something is needed further than culling stars indiscriminate-

Unicago at New York. We Tigers are not worried over the White Sox. We never were afraid of them since early spring. But Boston commands our wholesome respect. That is the only outfield that could hope to match the Tiger trio. Our infields shape up about even in strength. Boston, I think, has, more good pitchers than any other club in major league circles. Therefore, there is intelligible that the likelihood of any battery collapse in the coming drive. We have four reliable performers, however, and three won the 1914 national bunting and a world's series emblem for the Braves. Detroit, I still feel confident, will be there at the finish with the Red Sox. Yesterday's Games.

Our team realizes, however, that it will have to fight every minute to keep within striking distance of those sturdy pacemaking Red Sox. I have heard there was serious dissension in Carrigan's ranks early in the season, but this has all been smoothed over now. I was told recently that a clique had tried to undermine Carrigan, but that Tris Speaker's lovalty discovered the plot and afforded the chance of remedy in time. Whether this is so I do not know, for I have never been inquisitive in clubhouse politics.
